Some details from the post could not be confirmed, or turned out to be outdated or wrong. Those are flagged per company and summarized again in the "Unconfirmed" section at the end.

Rune deploys modular GPU/AI-compute infrastructure directly at solar power plants, using stranded midday solar power that would otherwise go to waste, instead of building traditional grid-connected data centers. Its product, RELIC, connects straight to a solar field's native DC power, skipping AC conversion losses and multi-year data-center build times. Own tagline: "Sun to Silicon."

7. BackOps

8. Noetive

Noetive builds agent-to-agent communication infrastructure. It also offers Bud (mail/calendar/contacts for agents) and MCP integration tools. Own tagline: "Agent-to-agent communication, without the wiring in between."

Magentic builds AI agents ("Mages") that work inside a manufacturer's existing software, via Microsoft Teams and email like a human colleague, to handle procurement: choosing suppliers, negotiating contracts, placing orders, clearing invoices, spend analysis, contract compliance, and supplier invoice recovery. Own tagline: "AI digital workers for the physical world." Founded by Robin Van Aeken (ex-McKinsey) and Odhran O'Donoghue (ex-OpenAI).

Note: a different, unrelated company also uses the name "Magentic AI" at gomagentic.com. That is not this company; the correct site is magentic.com.

10. TypeSafe AI

TypeSafe AI builds machine-native intelligence infrastructure meant to run inside software rather than chat with people: models that return typed, structured decisions with calibrated confidence scores instead of free text, so they can be safely called inside production automation. Its first model, Jev, is meant to be invoked repeatedly by applications that need a judgment call. Founded by Diogo Almeida (ex-OpenAI, RLHF and early ChatGPT) with Erik Gafni and Sasha Sheng.

Unconfirmed

- Rune's third-party application system, believed to be at jobs.polymer.co/rune, returned a 403 error and could not be confirmed live. Apply through rune.energy/careers instead.
- Rune's exact HQ city is unconfirmed: sources disagree between Palo Alto and San Francisco.
- Crusoe's careers page is live but its job listings are JavaScript-rendered and could not be read by research tools, so no specific open roles, locations, or application links could be confirmed for Crusoe.
- AIUC's own job-detail pages at aiuc.com/job-details/founding-gtm and aiuc.com/job-details/chief-of-staff are dead (404), even though they appeared in a recent search index. Use the Ashby board instead.
- Individual roles for AIUC, Temporal, and BackOps could not be linked to their own application pages; only the careers page or job-board shell could be confirmed live.
- Noetive's careers page lists no open roles at all, despite the post naming three specific openings (AI Research Scientist, AI Native Full Stack Engineer, AI Native Product Manager). These could not be found anywhere on the company's site.
- gomagentic.com / magentic.ai is a different, unrelated company also called "Magentic AI" (an automation-services agency in India/US). It is not the procurement startup from the post and is not used anywhere in this document.
- The post's link to <https://aistartupjobs.com/> is dead (403 Forbidden).
- The post's link to <https://github.com/vinitshahdeo/awesome-ai-startups-2026> is dead (404).
