UGC creator campaigns with SideShift and Trybe

Strengths and best use

Both sources are useful for building a creator pipeline. A concrete portfolio and accurate brief review give you a better basis for accepting work and evaluating whether a campaign pays for the time involved.

Compare the actual brief

SideShift (https://sideshift.app/creators) offers a place to find creator briefs. Verify deliverables, revisions, approval, usage term, exclusivity, paid-ad rights and payment timing with the offer. Trybe (https://jointrybe.com/) describes a performance-based model. Its creator app (https://apps.apple.com/us/app/trybe-creators/id6759299465) lists brand discovery, submissions, ad performance and commission tracking.

For commission offers, record the applicable sales base, attribution window, returns, minimums, and whether the brand activated the ad. The Trybe reel's counts and suggested reapplication schedule remain unverified. Its displayed dates vary. Use campaign instructions and record an actual next eligible date when the platform gives one.

Project idea

Create a small tracker for fit, offer terms, production time, revisions, approved deliverables, ad activation and cash received. Enter your own offers manually or through an authorized export. Compare cleared net receipts per total active hour across a fixed-fee brief and a performance offer. Keep usage permissions and evidence with the corresponding campaign.

Reusable prompt

Review these supplied creator offers. Compare deliverables, all production time, usage and payout terms. Show which missing conditions could change the economics, then produce an auditable shortlist.
```
